ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

There have been many sources for the information that are herein presented. Research centers include the Daughters of the American Revolution, the National Archives and Records Administration, and the Library of Congress. Particularly valuable sources have been family members and relatives with whom I have consulted and corresponded with over the years.

I was fortunate to visit some sites such as the old Solomon Frum homestead in West Virginia. During that 1984 visit I met with Sarah Victor who had been a data collector for many years. We were enthusiastically sharing information to the point that the hours slipped by and she then invited me to spend the night in her home. Her hospitality was typical of the people I met during my brief visit to that area.

With the development of the Internet I have been able to gather more comprehensive information and in the attached Bibliography there are my websites listed as references.

Finally, I have depended liberally upon the research performed by many others. If I have not properly cited credit for their diligent work please let me know and I will correct that oversight.
